

Beyond The Horizon

As the sun rose above the rooftops of Tynwald High School at precisely 6:45 AM, a warm golden light crept across the empty desks and chairs chasing away the remnants of the night's shadows. Inevitably, Madara who was always the first to arrive at school stood at the edge of the balcony, his eyes glowing as the golden crisp sunlight danced across his face. He gazed out at the orange glow with a heart yearning for something way beyond the horizon.

Madara had harbored a dream to just pack a bag and go off exploring the world alone to seek a dimension of infinite possibilities. His responsibilities like going to school or attending Ma'am Chihwayi's French weekend lessons were just suffocating his sense of adventure. Little did he know that the dream he had was soon going to become a reality.

With so much thought and a deep breath Madara began his journey, leaving behind a lot of school work and his father dumbfounded by his actions. He climbed towering mountains, crossed scintillating rivers and fought with stray dogs. Every new day brought a new challenge of its own, but it was nothing too difficult for Madara to handle.

As the days turned into weeks Madara found himself lost in the dense, mist-shrouded forest of the ancient mountains. He had been travelling for hours, but a wrong turn somewhere had led him deep into the woods. Madara trudged on, his feet aching and his sense dulled, but he could not shake the feeling that he was being watched. Suddenly a snapping twig, disturbed the gentle rustling of the leaves. Madara's eyes opened to find two individuals standing before him. "What brings you two here? Are you my enemies?" Madara asked trying to keep his voice steady. "No, we are not here to hurt you." Hashirama said gently. "We want to help you." Sakura shouted. Hashirama, one of the founders of the village hidden in the leaves seeking eternal peace and power to protect his village together with Sakura, a young girl fleeing from her village after she was forced into marriage by her parents.

Together, they found their way out of the forest and formed a family, bound by their desires to seek new discoveries. With each step their thirst for adventure grew as the unknown unfolded its secrets to a world beyond the horizon.
