

Over coffee

Want to go on a coffee date? Many people think a nice breakfast with, in most cases, the love of your life. As far as I'm concerned, I think of seeking the love over coffee. Warmth of the coffee, warmth of the body, spirit, and mind. The ideal locale for a flawless strategy.

She's thinking the coffee date is about sharing memories and nostalgia, but wait... As we sipped our coffee, I revealed my true intention: sharing the love of Christ with her. The warmth of the coffee was matched only by the warmth of the Holy Spirit in our hearts. I shared my testimony, and she listened intently, her eyes sparkling with curiosity.

As we delved deeper into conversation, our hearts opened up like flowers blooming in the sun. We discovered shared passions for serving others and a desire to make a meaningful impact on the world. Our discussion flowed effortlessly, like a gentle stream meandering through the countryside.

As we sipped our coffee, I shared my goal - to help others find their way. It's the season of seeking, a time to connect and show we care. I asked her, "Hey, are you searching for something more? A sense of purpose or a connection that's real?"

She smiled and said, "Maybe. I'm trying to figure out life, you know?" I shared my story, and how God's love has made a difference. I asked her, "Don't you want to know Him too? He's the One who truly gets us."

She listened intently, her eyes sparkling with curiosity. I said, "It's not about rules or religion, but a real relationship." She laughed and said, "You're really passionate about this, huh?" I smiled and said, "Yeah, because it's changed my life in ways I never thought possible."

Ever felt like you're trying to have a deep conversation, but your words start to become as flat as a lukewarm coffee? That's when the Holy Spirit steps in like a barista extraordinaire, brewing up the perfect blend of wisdom and compassion! It's like having a spiritual coffee coach, guiding you to ask the right questions and share the right words at the right time. And just when you think you're in over your head, the Holy Spirit gives you a spiritual shot of espresso, filling you with boldness and confidence to share the Good News. This meeting was all about being a humble messenger, relying on the Spirit's guidance to connect hearts and souls over coffee.

In that cozy coffee shop, we experienced a spiritual connection that transcended a casual meetup. We savored every moment, every word, and every laugh, knowing that our encounter was a gift from above.

The coffee shop became a sanctuary, a divine appointment. We laughed, cried, and prayed together, our spirits soaring. It was a date with destiny, a union of souls. Our connection was not just a chance encounter but a God-ordained meeting.

As we finished our coffee and prepared to part ways, we exchanged numbers and made a promise to stay in touch. Our coffee date became a holy ground, a reminder that every moment can be a sacred opportunity to share God's love and grace. And that's how we brewed up a divine connection over coffee.
