Beyond The Horizon

The beauty of life can be spectacular if we cherish and embrace the petite things around us. If pretty was a person, dare I posit that she would want to commit suicide because of how daunting the world has become.

The way people who wear gorgeous are being handled on this land we would love be to call ours is petrifying. Never had I ever imagined outlooking someone could be a call for bullying. This is beyond the horizon.

Everytime I walk by I can feel the eyes of fellow ladies wanting to throw daggers at me. What for? Are we not all women and girls? Where is this urge of wanting to compare our physical appearances coming from? Ladies have become weakened by the thought of being liked by the people around.

We give people the right to walk all over us and tell us we are ugly. Maybe that's what they see but beauty is in the eye of the beholder. Get a grip over yourself and not let external judgements flood your minds. We are not society. We define ourselves. If pretty was a person permit me to say that she would adorn herself like the queen of England. I am friends with pretty and the way I act is justified because I feel good wearing that confidence with her.

I am harassed for befriending pretty and I wish not to be pardoned for my self love. Assuming that I would be apologetic for your insecurities is a bigger insecurity. I am not ashamed of who I am. Bully me all you want. Talk behind my back all day. I am assured that you will never have the courage to shut me up because I am not wrong. Ladies also aspire to be amicable with pretty however society has unjust comments about such people.

To society, whenever pretty's friends pass by, havock comes along trying to break families. Dim thoughts like that can be changed if we tame ourselves to have massive selfcontrol. I am not part of society neither shall I think like society. Make a scene all you want. Try to scare me away from your husbands as often as you can. My goals do not intertwine with your thoughts so worry yourself not for I will not come after what is yours.
